

To whom it may concern

Kevin Stapleton is resigning

It is with regret that we announce the resignation of Mr. Kevin Stapleton of Akro-Pak Brüel after many years in the industry, and we wish him a happy and long retirement. Mr. Stapleton has been part of the Jorgensen Group since 2005 operating out of the Akro-Pak Brüel premises in Castle Hill NSW.

Kevin is resigning

Strengthening of business

Akro-Pak Brüel is being combined with its sister company in Melbourne, Tripax Engineering, to offer both companies' customers a more efficient, cost effective facility to better service the Australian market.

Akro-Pak Brüel will remain a company in its own right whereas manufacture and service will be handled by Tripax Engineering in Melbourne. A new sales representative - Simon Corrigan - is appointed to handle enquiries of Brüel washing equipment. Simon is a project sales engineer with many years' experience as sales and marketing manager in an international company. The Brüel international team wishes him every success.

Experienced back up and service

Tripax Engineering has been designing and manufacturing Industrial Food Processing Equipment in Australia for more than 50 years and is well suited to maintain the current manufacturing and service programme of Akro-Pak Brüel. Furthermore, it has the full support and back-up of Brüel head office in Denmark with full use of its intellectual property. This enables Tripax/Brüel to offer its Australian customers the latest in customised solutions.

Akro-Pak Brüel filling equipment will now be serviced by the Tripax service department. This experienced team is well equipped to handle many facets of service work. The Akro-Pak Brüel filling and washing equipment is now being integrated into the Tripax programme.
